PROPERTY HISTORY

Built in 1904 by J. Montgomery Sears, one of Boston's wealthiest gentlemen of that time, this home is considered one of the most notable in town. His wife, Sarah Choate Sears, was an accomplished photographer and artist who loved entertaining. Her lifelong friendships included John Singer Sargent and Isabella Stewart Gardner. In fact, Sargent painted portraits of both Sarah and Helen Sears, possibly on this property. The famous portrait of their daughter, Helen Sears, hangs locally in The Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Mrs. Sears' art studio graced the back corner of the property, and one of her original paintings can be found in the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston.

OWNERS' COMMENTS

The current homeowners fell in love with this remarkable home and its history. They lovingly updated the property, marrying the period details with today's conveniences. "Raising our children here has been a gift. We have created so many incredible memories in this spectacular home and are grateful to now be part of its history as just the third family to live here. We are ready to pass it along to the next owners to experience it in all its wonder and grand beauty."
